Reason for Appeal

My mother died on 14 June. Her burial was in Kentucky on 18 June. I flew out of DFW the evening before and flew back to DFW very early the next morning. I never in my life thought you'd nix my unemployment pay because my mother died so I just said I was gone that week. In fact I was unavailable only one day of that week....the 18th.

My mother's memorial service was the following week on the 25th in Kentucky. Once again, I flew out the night before, and then left Kentucky to fly back early the following morning. Therefore I was only officially unavailable one day of that week, the 25th.

I should have been more explicit when filling out the unemployment forms but as I said I never expected you to hold it against me that my mother died. It seems like when someone on unemployment has a death in the family as close as their mother, you'd be a little more compassionate.

Now I can't pay my rent for July. I've been fired from my job, my mother just died and I can't pay my rent. And I wasn't expecting to come back to no money in my checking account. I mortgaged my soul in order to buy the plane tickets so there's no extra. I'm maxed out on my credit cards.

I was on the phone with a representative from TWC this past Tuesday talking about this claim and he said he was going to pay it....in fact he said it had already been paid. Then I see this.

At least I'd like you to compensate me for the 2 weeks save 2 days because I was available 8 out of the 10 days. It was my fault for not saying so in detail.

Do you need an interpreter during the hearing? No

If yes, please select the language needed (not applicable)

If you selected 'Other' type the language needed (not applicable)

If you need an accommodation, describe the accommodation you need

I have a service dog. If there's any need for my physical presence at a hearing, I'd need to bring her with me.
